Teacher, Coach, and Public Speaker

Meredith Colby is an expert on singing and the voice. Creator of Neuro-Vocal, the voice training method that is based on brain science, Meredith has been a voice teacher for over 25 years. Her specialty is CCM (Contemporary Commercial Music) and her experience includes over 20 years as a busy freelance singer. She is the author of Money Notes: How to Sing High, Loud, Healthy, and Forever (WiseInk, 2017). Meredith regularly posts blogs and videos aimed at helping singers and voice teachers.

Meredith's presentations are most often given to professional and avocational singers and musicians, though she also has lively and short presentations that are interesting and entertaining to any sort of group. Meredith has developed speech topics of interest to the general public, as well as some geared specifically for music stores and schools, which can be used to create events that are attractive to new, potential clients.

Everyone has a voice: a voice they care about and that is part of their identity. Most people don't know much about their voice, however, and take it for granted. Audiences gain a new appreciation for the magic of speech and singing as they learn about how their voices work, how to care for and preserve their voices, and how to make the most of their "vocal impression" on others.

Testimonials

"Meredith was funny and personable, and she really knows her stuff. I learned so much today about something I never really thought about before. I enjoyed the presentation immensely and would recommend her to anyone."

- Terry A., Chicago

"I sing and play guitar, but I've never taken any lessons. This talk was my first experience with a voice professional, and it was so great! I feel like I'm more open minded now, and like it's probably a good idea to get some lessons so my voice will last"

- Avery M., Evanston
